MONTY'S QUESTION AND ANSWER

Question:
Are there introvert and extrovert types of horses and is one better than the other?

Monty's Answer:
I don't believe very strongly there is this introvert and extrovert type of horse. Yes, there are differences. But I think the introverted, properly handled horse will express himself. And sometimes this introvert horse will win... and the extrovert horse will be beaten. But you can't drive him in to his cave. You can't treat him in a hard way and expect him to perform.

The quiet horse with the low heart rate and the low cortisol levels in the bloodstream and low adrenaline is more likely to succeed than the distracted or excited horse. I say it is more the style of training than it is the personality that he is born with. If you meet that horse's needs, the introvert will perform for you as well as the question below. I mean this. Sit down and write an answer. Don't wait for my answer next week. If you have been reading my Weekly Questions and Answers for the last six months, you should be in a position to do this. Send your answer to my team at: askmonty@montyroberts.com personality that he is both wild. If you meet that horse's needs, the introvert will perform for you as well as the extrovert.

Why should you bother? Because it will help you focus. There is probably a comparable question in your life that needs answering - or will be. If you can gain insight into how to go about answering a practical question that is loosely related to your problem, this exercise will help you answer your nagging question. Then read my answer. I want all of my students to learn to be better trainers than me. That's good for you and good for horses!

Next Week's Question:

I have a horse and he has a lot of energy. He's three years old and I want to start him. I have a round pen but when I put him in the pen with the intention of doing Join-Up I send him away and he just starts to run. He goes too fast even to the point that it seems dangerous. I remain very quiet, not pressuring him to run but he just seems to glaze over, pay no attention to me and continue at top speed. How shall I solve this problem?
