Question

I'd like to do Join-Up with Lucas, but as it's a pretty busy barn and I'm just leasing, I don't want to announce it. Meaning, I'd like to tack him up at least with a saddle and take him to the round pen before my free ride. Is still effective if he's already saddled?

Answer

Thank you for your question. If your horse is wearing a saddle during Join-Up it makes absolutely no difference. It is true however, that the horse's head should be free of any restraint. This means no bit, bridle, or reins tied back to the saddle. A halter on the horse's head is no problem. One should be aware that horses will sometimes want to roll after a Join-Up. This would not be a good activity with a saddle on.

Please review videos and if possible my Equus Online University so that Join-Up can be executed in the best possible way.

ONLINE REVIEW: THE WONDERS OF THE DUALY HALTER

"This is the best tack money can buy. Thank you Monty, my Dandy Boy follows me now with no hesitation and has overcome so many insecure problems he had. Everyone kept asking me why I was still ground working him, and I told them wait and see. Now I'm the only one that has a horse that will go anywhere with absolutely no hesitation, and I have his full trust."

MONTY'S CHALLENGE

Test yourself each week as I challenge you to answer the question below. I mean this. Sit down and write an answer. Don't wait for my answer next week. If you have been reading my Weekly Questions and Answers for the last six months, you should be in a position to do this. Send your answer to my team at: askmonty@montyroberts.com

Why should you bother? Because it will help you focus. There is probably a comparable question in your life that needs answering - or will be. If you can gain insight into how to go about answering a practical question that is loosely related to your problem, this exercise will help you answer your nagging question. Then read my answer. I want all of my students to learn to be better trainers than me. That's good for you and good for horses!

NEXT WEEK'S QUESTION

Good Afternoon Mr Roberts.

I can imagine you get inundated with emails everyday with people who have issues with their horses but I do hope you take the time to read this.

My name is Hope Filby and I am from a little village in North Wales (little village but a long name: Garndolbenmaen). Around 5 years ago I purchased a Thoroughbred Mare named Orphan Annie. Her name was a result of her mother sadly passing away whilst giving birth to Annie. She was originally bred to race but never made a career out of it. Her first year with us included putting weight on her, treating the rain scald and getting her to trust us. She was a nightmare to lead into the field and had many times pinned either my mum or I in the corner of a stable and once broke my mothers ribs and foot. I, however, was determined to get her broken in and rideable. It may have taken us a few years but now we can enjoy taking her for a ride and lead her into a field without any issues (although we are still a little cautious of her!). However, there is an issue with getting her into a trailer which is a shame as this little Mare has a lot of potential to do well.

I have tried many techniques including the following:

Rope behind her

Your Dually

Halters

Food

Blindfolding

Fencing on either side of the ramp

A new, larger trailer with more windows to allow more light in

Leaving the trailer in a field with her

Patrician out

Our other horse in the trailer

As you can see I have tried many things but I can't seem to get her in. She is happy to get her feet on the ramp and stand there but as soon as you put a little pressure from the front or back she will either rear up or pull back off the ramp and we have to start the process again. When we do finally get her in she is relaxed and travels well but the daunting fear of having to get her back in to go home looms over us which means we no longer take her to places. She shows no fear and when I have worked with her and the trailer will lick and chew. I have stood in my trailer crying and begging for her to get in but nothing seems to work and I am now running out of options. Is she being stubborn or is there a fear behind all of this that I haven't noticed?

Mr Roberts, I have always admired the work you do (so much so I read your autobiography when I was in school while all the other girls were reading chick flicks), I have been to your shows and cried every time you joined up with a horse, I have your autograph and have followed your instructions from your books. I want my Mare to trust me and get into the trailer so I can take her to lessons and competitions and show her off to the rest of the world. If you ever find yourself in the UK or near Wales would you please kindly consider visiting me and showing me how I can overcome this?

I look forward to your reply.

Kind Regards

Hope
